an interdisciplinary & community-based anti-poverty conference

Mission Statement:

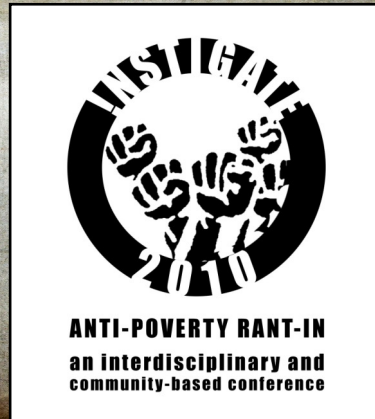

We are organizing an interdisciplinary, community-based conference on poverty for October 2010. It will address disconnections between academics, activists, and impoverished communities to create dialogue across disciplines and social boundaries in order to challenge existing institutions that reproduce inequality and marginalization.

The goals of this conference are to provide a safe space for people in poverty and those committed to poverty issues to present their ideas and experiences. Participants are encouraged to present in a manner in which they feel most comfortable, whether that be a traditional panel or through workshops, roundtable discussions, artistic media, etc.

In addition, the aims of the conference are to identify, incorporate, and support other anti-poverty initiatives in Kingston, including the establishment of a networking hub at Queen's University for activists, advocates, social justice organizations, and academics to share information on poverty issues, research, and anti-poverty initiatives in Kingston Ontario.
